How Bryan Met Schley.

If Rear Admiral Schley is nominated for Vice President at Kansas City this story of the first meeting between Bryan and him will make even more entertaining reading than it is now. Bryan had never met Schley when the latter went West a few months ago. It will be recalled that the Rear Admiral stopped with Gen. Manderson in Omaha and was given a hearty reception by the Nebraska people. When Rear Admiral Schley and Mrs. Schley left Omaha they occupied a stateroom on the sleeper. Bryan boarded the same train to go somewhere. Mr. Rosewater, of the Omaha Bee, was another passenger. He had met the Rear Admiral at Omaha and joined his party. After the train had been out some time Mr. Bryan sought Mr. Rosewater and said he would like to meet the Schleys. The latter was agreeable and Mr. Rosewater made the introductions. Mr. Bryan chatted sometime pleasantly, and as it was about meal time suggested that he would like to have the others as his guests in the dining car. Mrs. Schley promptly asked to be excused, saying that they had breakfasted late and were not hungry. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Rosewater went to the dining car together. A little while later the editor was surprised to see well laden trays and other evidences of a comfortable meal going into the Schleys' stateroom. When he resumed conversation with the Rear Admiral and Mrs. Schley, the latter explained: "If Mr. Bryan's invitation had been accepted a wrong construction might have been put upon it. Mr. Bryan is not going to be nominated again. The gold Democrats will prevent it. That is settled. Maryland and other eastern states will send delegates who will not consent." Enough more was said to convey the impression that the Schleys regarded Mr. Bryan, no longer ago than early last winter, as a dead duck politically and did not desire for personal reasons to appear too friendly with him. Mrs. Schley had declined to be Mr. Bryan's guest at dinner because she saw something politically compromising in it for the Rear Admiral. —Washington Cor. Globe Democrat.

Women in Turkey.

The lot of women in Turkey, in spite of the change for the better that recent years have inaugurated, seems to leave something to be desired. Foreign governesses have educated the children in the best Turkish households, and therefore they grow up with European habits and ideas. But the sultan, it appears, is resolved that Turkish ladies shall not adopt the customs of European women, and fears that with the spread of education they may desire greater freedom and wish to assert their individuality to an extent that might prove inconvenient. He, therefore, is constantly making more and more stringent rules as to their conduct, forbidding them to wear a yashmak that does not cover the face properly, or to indulge in dress which have sleeves and waists, wishing them to adhere to the old shapeless garment called Feridji.

The latest regulation is to the effect that the police must disperse any gathering of more than three women in the streets. Thus these much to be pitied women have no social life at all, is, owing to the sultan's dread of any gathering, no parties of any kind are permitted, save wedding parties. The only freedom, if it can be called so, that the Turkish ladies are allowed is on Friday and Sunday, when they go in boats and carriages to the Sweet Waters of Europe and Asia, being then closely watched in case they should transgress any one of the numerous rules and regulations laid down for them.

Such a life seems almost impossible to realize. We fortunate women who are accustomed to entire freedom of action and thought, and take it as a matter of course, cannot for a moment conceive what this kind of existence means. But there are signs that beneath the surface a change for the better is working, and in spite of all obstacles no doubt the Turkish woman in time will claim and receive greater liberty and less restricted social intercourse.—Madame.

Alaska's Golden Future.

The Senate spent about six weeks and the House is now putting the finishing touches upon a voluminous bill providing laws and a civil government for Alaska. It is a little more than thirty years since some skeptical Senators and Representatives were willing to vote the $7,000,000 to Russia as a gift if the United States could persuade some other nation to take Alaska off our hands. Now the territory which has been that only in name is to have political autonomy next to statehood. Congress feels that is high time. Looking forward to early realization of the great expectations for Alaska, the statesmen are proceeding with much care. Alaska is to send a delegation to the Republican National Convention. It seems strange to hear that only nine days will be required to make the journey from the territory to Philadelphia. Alaska is so far out of the world as people have been thinking. Gov. Brady, who has been

In Washington helping the committees of Congress with the Alaska bill, thinks that the present year will see an output of $15,000,000 in gold from the American diggings, chief of which, of course, is the Cape Nome beach. The Klondike, on the British side of the line, will, it is estimated, turn out over $15,000,000. From this northwest corner of the continent a few years ago displaced, will contribute the present season $30,000,000 in gold. According to Governor Brady and the other Alaska people who have been here in the interest of the legislation, these figures represent only the beginning. "In five years," the prediction was made at the capitol the present week, "the Territory of Alaska will be producing $100,000,000 in gold yearly." It takes one's breath away.
